Toad, if citing the Scripture accurately counts as White Knighting, I'll do it all day long. You would do well to try it.

So what we have here is, apparently, that some people view spanking as a turn-on, in which case it will be ineffective discipleship of one's wife in the case of a sin issue, and others view it as violence, in which case it falls on the wrong side of 1 Peter 3:7.

In either case, moronic idea, and it has nothing to do with holding women up on a pedestal, but rather has everything to do with treating one's "spare rib" the way God intended. As the, ahem, weaker vessel.

Nice name-calling, Toad, but that merely demonstrates that you are either unable or unwilling to make a real argument. They don't call it the ad hominem "fallacy" for nothing, after all.
